

Amy Engleman, Ph.D., Research Associate and Project Manager

Amy Engelman brings expertise in early childhood and positive youth development, community-based participatory research and evaluation, and a multi-disciplinary background of theories and systems that affect children, youth, families, and communities. Amy has conducted a variety of community-based research and evaluation projects, including a scan of positive youth development policies and practices in Colorado; social marketing research on HIV/AIDS Care Services, pandemic flu and emergency preparedness; the process of engaging youth in action research within a school setting; the effectiveness of a community organizing and leadership development initiative; community-university partnerships; and after-school program effectiveness. Amy also possesses the ability to work successfully with a variety of partners, including non-profits, state and local agencies, universities, faith-based organizations, schools, coalitions, families and youth. She has presented at international conferences on service-learning and transdisciplinary play-based assessment. Amy holds a doctorate in Child, Family and School Psychology from the University of Denver.
