

Lyn Kathlene, Ph.D., Senior Research Associate

Lyn Kathlene is a senior research associate at the Center for Systems Integration (CSI). Prior to joining CSI, she was the founding director of the Colorado Institute of Public Policy (CIPP) and professor of political science at Colorado State University. Dr. Kathlene has facilitated research-based stakeholder dialogues; directed numerous community action projects; overseen the design and implementation of both formative and summative evaluations for state agencies, non-profits, and local governments; and designed and implemented citizen participatory planning, policy and planning processes, and non-traditional policy research methods. Her research has been published in the top journals of political science and public policy, and she has received numerous research and teaching awards. In addition to publications, Dr. Kathlene's research on livable communities is the subject of a NE-PBS documentary Community by Design. Currently, she is writing an environmental policy textbook, co-chairs the National Advisory Committee of the Leadership for Healthy Communities Initiative at the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and is an Advisory Committee member for a National Science Foundation's Integrative Graduate Education and Research Traineeship (IGERT) project on water sustainability. Dr. Kathlene received her M.A. in public policy analysis and Ph.D. in political science from the University of Colorado-Boulder. Her academic appointments have been at Purdue University, University of Minnesota (on sabbatical at the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs), the University of Nebraska – Lincoln, and Colorado State University.
